

Findings

- Natural gas is capturing a larger share of the energy market
- LNG complements the distribution of natural gas by pipeline, particularly in remote locations
- Demand exists for shipping LNG by rail, which can be both competitive and complementary to the truck and pipeline networks
- LNG Exports will increase through 2022 as import facilities are converted to export facilities
- Emerging LNG markets include maritime, rail and truck fuel operations